PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

In his legal practice, Gene aims to help clients achieve their goals in a way that addresses current needs while paying special attention to potential issues down the road. He works with clients to reach legal solutions and frameworks that encompass practical concerns. This is accomplished by understanding their operational, financial and organizational situation, then providing advice tailored to their unique needs.

Gene has also worked as a technology consultant and a financial reporting analyst for a division of a Fortune 100 tech company. He has experience with a variety of legal matters including corporate law, public and private finance, commercial transactions, and corporate governance.

Gene DeAngelis is part of the business services group at Wegman Hessler. He previously worked in the business group of BakerHostetler and at Squire Patton Boggs. Gene began practicing law in the Chicago office of Skadden Arps, where he was an associate in their corporate finance group.

His practice focuses on new business formation, public and private finance, and commercial transactions.
